METRO RANKS WELL IN TRANSIT REPORT

JEFF NAGEL SURREY LEADER (Black Press) Metro Vancouver has ranked second with a B grade in the first-ever national rankings of sustainable urban transportation practices. The region trailed firstplace Victoria in GreenApple Canada's Smart Transportation Rankings. Abbotsford, which got a D grade, was ranked 14th out of the 18 urban areas in Canada surveyed. The rankings, released by the Appleton Foundation and UBC's Sauder School of Business Friday, aim to foster debate on ways to help fight climate change. The report credits Metro Vancouver's strong efforts to manage its high rate of growth and the move toward higher-density housing for the high ranking.

REGINA SLOW ON
 green transportation By KAREN BROWNLEE Leader-Post At least one city employee is questioning whether Regina deserves the low ranking it received in a Canadian report on sustainable transportation. Regina - along with Saskatoon and Oshawa, Ont. — are tied for 20th place on a list of 27 communities in the GreenApple Canada 2007 SMART transportation ranking report. The report outlines the expectations of an expert panel as well as how closely each city comes to achieving those expectations. While there are targets in the report that City of Regina acting director of transportation George Penn said are worth investigating, he has questions about how Regina was portrayed.
